

Barry Mann

Barry Mann was let go from a job with a delivery company, and came to Private Industry Training Dept for help in training as a police officer. PITD sent him to post-training in Modesto. PITD did not pay for the post-training (not on the ETPL), But did provide supportive services, uniforms, ammunition, and transportation.

After the completion of post-training, Barry was placed on a work experience site with the City of Dos Palos Police Dept as a reserve officer. This was a paid work experience site. In addition to the wages, PITD also purchased additional uniforms (different colors than the post-training) and safety equipment.

During his work experience training, an opening developed at the PD, and Barry applied and was interviewed. Barry did so well that another department offered him a better paying job, but he turned it down to work for Dos Palos PD.