

Stan Smith

Stan Smith wanted to get into construction, but never had the opportunity. Stan enrolled in the Private Industry Training Dept and Human Services Agency Building Trades Pre-Apprenticeship Program. He completed training on a Friday, and started work the next Monday for the company that built the Mainplace Theater complex.

The instructors of the Building Trades Pre-Apprenticeship Program stated Stan was great in class—a top student and aggressive. Stan is described as having good self-discipline, and finds ways around and over obstacles. Because Stan is determined to reach the goal he has set for himself, the instructors of the Building Trades Program think he will eventually own his own contracting business.